Equality for women is a right - not a privilege, and it will take concerted and focused effort to help the industry make it a reality.

- Margaret Resce Milkint and David Mendelsohn, WING co-founders

A 2017 study found 41% of men had publicly advocated for equality, inclusion and diversity at work and collaborated with others to convert attitudes and diminish barriers to diversity.

WHAT STRIDES HAVE WOMEN MADE IN TODAY’S INDUSTRY?

The numbers tell a story of progress; however, there’s still a long road ahead.

Women are paid roughly 22% less than men in the same insurance jobs.¹

Women make up only 17% of directors, 8% of named officers and 10% of top officers in the industry.³

In a 2017 insurance industry demographic study, 58% of surveyed companies had two or more women on their boards, as opposed to 34% in 2013.²

A 2017 study found 41% of men had publicly advocated for equality, inclusion and diversity at work and collaborated with others to convert attitudes and diminish barriers to diversity.⁴

FEATURED PAST EVENTS:

Unconscious Bias: panelists included Myrna Chao, Global Co-Chair Inclusion & Diversity Council for Willis Towers Watson; Ronald Reeves, Head of Diversity & Inclusion - U.S., Canada, Latin America & Caribbean for AIG; and David Mendelsohn, Partner at DLA Piper.

Activating Growth: Mobilizing Success with Advisors, Mentors & Sponsors: supported by Kari Luttrell, Regional Operations Manager for All Risks, Ltd.

Workplace Trends Through the Lens of Insurance, Crisis Management and the Law: hosted by Leanne Berry, Business Development Director for AIG.

Practical Inclusion: Actionable Ideas and Real Answers: hosted by Aon’s Chief Knowledge Officer Neeru Arora.

GET INVOLVED:

WING currently hosts local events in Chicago, New York, Dallas, Atlanta, and San Francisco.

To join our mailing list for event invites and group updates, email WING@jacobsononline.com.